Lobby

White Tiger by Ki-Yan

In the lobby, you will find a majestic depiction of the guardian beast Byakko (White Tiger), created by the artist Ki-Yan (Hideki Kimura), who is known for his dynamic style. Said to protect the western direction of Kyoto, the White Tiger's tail, painted along the entrance wall, guides its presence throughout the hotel, culminating in its powerful appearance in the lobby. The White Tiger is portrayed as a quiet guardian, watching over all who visit. The space as a whole expresses the "flow of energy" and the "symbol of protection," blending traditional Kyoto philosophy with the vibrancy of contemporary art.
